STORM SIGNALS—THE PROPAGATING GARDEN OF THE AGRICULTURAL BUREAU.—The House Committee on Agriculture held a session on Wednesday, and considered the proposition of Mr. A. Watson for the establishment of a system of storm signals by means of telegrams to forts, arsenals, and central points along the coast and in the interior of the country, to convey information of the approach of storms, with an especial view to the benefit of commerce and agriculture. The committee were agreed in their conclusion that, so far as relates to agriculture, the proposed system in its present shape is impracticable. Subsequently the committee spent some hours in an inspection of the propagating garden on Fourth street, which is under the direction of the Bureau of Agriculture, and is devoted chiefly to the propagation of economic plants and fruits, and of the building and ground of the department. Great satisfaction was expressed with the condition in which everything pertaining to the establishment was found, so far as the limited means at the disposal of the Commissioners had enabled him to carry out his plans, and with the thoroughly scientific system and efficiency with which the interior labors of the department are conducted, yielding, as they have already done, and are increasingly doing, results of immense practical value not only to agriculturists in every part of the country, but also to every other class of citizens.
